A dynamic centre for conservation and welfare, the park currently has around 475 animals across more than 60 different species. We aim to provide a quality, value for money experience that excites and inspires our guests.

The Animal Department at Yorkshire Wildlife Park

It is the responsibility of the animal department to provide a high standard of care for the animals at the park. We achieve this by the supply of suitable diets and enrichment as well as building enclosures which are innovative in their design and offer a stimulating environment for the animals. We aim to interact with the public through talks to effectively communicate important welfare, conservation and environmental messages. The department contributes to conversation by being an active member in European breeding programmes, undertaking fundraising for in situ projects and by facilitating research within the park.

Each member of staff needs to research and learn about conservation issues, have a good knowledge of the animals (in situ and ex situ), the conservation projects we support, breeding programmes we are involved with, experiences we offer and how zoos and parks are organised and work. They also need to have a full knowledge of the park and its visitor facilities.
